WebEOC Incident Name: 001-14 Winter Weather - Statewide - January 2014

GOHSEP is currently monitoring a very fluid winter weather situation occurring throughout the state. Multiple advisories and warnings have been issued for late today through tomorrow. The northern half of the state has already begun to experience some slight snow flurries, while the rest of the state will experience periods of winter precipitation starting this evening through tomorrow. It's important to note that even though freezing temperatures will be in place, the moisture content is what will drive this event. The further east you move throughout the state, the less moisture content will be available.
