The federal government continues to focus on the lives and safety of those affected by Hurricane Harvey in the states of Texas and Louisiana. While the response continues, FEMA and its federal, state, local, and tribal partners, are now directing efforts toward longer-term recovery processes.